

As you will be aware, the situation regarding Coronavirus (COVID-19) is evolving each day.

Using the latest government advice, as well as knowing the resources we have here at Rowham Steel, we are operating under a 'Sensibly, business as usual' plan as it is key at this stage to maintain stability during a turbulent time where our employees and customers will need us the most.

We are receiving regular updates around how to stay healthy and if symptoms were to develop, how to react without pressure. Our Cloud systems are allowing a small number of our staff to work from home, keeping our employees active and protecting the service they give to you.

---

We are restricting any non-essential visitors to our offices until we receive advice to the contrary. Visitors who do attend will be asked to kindly wash their hands before commencing their business with us. All our employees are washing their hands thoroughly before commencing or clocking on for the day's work. Our works operatives and goods inward/outward department are additionally wearing latex gloves for additional protection.

All our staff have been briefed on the current situation countrywide and have been given handbooks to read and understand the causes and symptoms of the Coronavirus (COVID-19), as well as how it can be spread if the correct precautions are not followed.

---

We will continue to monitor the situation daily and react accordingly. In the meantime we can assure you of our intention to continue with an uninterrupted service to our customers during this difficult and unprecedented time.
